

Anonymous (1885) The Great War and Disastrous Peace of 1885

Anonymous [signed M.P.] (1885) The Great War and Disastrous Peace of 1885

A short story of Britain being blockaded and starved into submission. More than half a million die of starvation in London. Britain settles agreeing to pay £200M p.a. to the "military Powers".
The verdict of the world was that our misfortunes proceeded from making ourselves too dependent on other countries for our food, from neglect of our Fleet, and from drifting along without a policy, and thus, by our vacillation, offending military Powers who would otherwise have been our friends.

Other posts of possible interest:

Conan Doyle, A. (1914) Danger! and Other Stories

Arnold-Forster, H.O. (1888) In a Conning Tower

Anonymous (1883) The Story of the battle of Port Said

Wood, W. (1905) Submarined

Anonymous (1884) How Glasgow Ceased to Flourish: a tale of 1890